

Religion and God

An Antidote of the Questioning Rebel
For the Atheist, Agnostic, And Christian

By Jason S. Page

1st Edition

Page Telegram Publishing, pagetelegram.com

Copyright © 2019 Jason S. Page

All rights reserved.

ISBN: 9781793826817

PRISM:

White Light Divider.

WHITE LIGHT:

Mono Light Before Becoming Poly by Prism.

SHAVIDICA:

Access to the One through the Many.

CONTENTS

Introduction

Light, Prism and Shavidica

Moment Space

The State of AmGod/Dogma

INTRODUCTION

Would you consider the possibility that an omnipresent God and an Extra-Terrestrial surrogate as God is often muddling our understanding of Him through the Bible?!

Of God, the question what is or who is God has been on the minds of many for millennia. And the distinction between the two tenses is often I have found, ignored among fellow Christians I know. The idea of being literally created in His image and the pronouns referring to God as 'He' often lends the understanding that He is of our likeness and nature, ie Extra-Terrestrial.

Hinduism, has better accounts of the "vessels" in the skies and the cosmic wars that were accounted during the same time across the globe. It is argued that Jesus's time of the biblical undocumented ages he spent in Bharat (India) and got most of his spiritual learning of God, then and there. His ability to heal, can be very likely of and from the Vedic sciences of the day.

So it is likely when compared to the biblical accounts of Jesus, that he led on a school of thought in the Vedic sciences while publicly appealing that nature of his through God as mysticism. And the Jewish leadership had and executed issue against his masquerading as God's One and only Son.

The ideal that he is The Son of God when we are all children of God is remiss to the latter in my understanding of present day Christian ideology, again crossing the figurative into the literal.

The Bible has been through not only literal interpretation, however through the ages, the literal bend had been involved also in it's transliterations.

I do not think anyone can claim to know the Bible either which is why I think it shalt not be preached and rather be used as something for which to grow the self if so one chooses.

And the evangelistic approach I think is largely abused as demonstrated with the cultural slang phrase Bible "thumping" and we miss the real approach that Jesus walked: to demonstrate one's faith and obedience to God by example; spend time with the 'outcasts,' and lift them from their level. And when necessary, protest.

It seems today the 'conservative' movement being largely associated with "Christian" beliefs is the exact opposite. The Bible discusses this in Revelations, and to paraphrase: the tables have turned. Those who claim they are Christians and do the work of imperialism, fascism or in support of any system that strikes against humanity how Jesus would walk are the one's to be damned.

PRISM, LIGHT AND SHAVIDICA

The Trinity is all inclusive of the One through Light. That God shines His light through us in our conditioning is by means of developing a pathway from His consciousness to our individual consciousness is Shavidica, or in the Christian transliteration, The Holy Spirit.

Jesus represents Light divided, The Prism or the Son, into all the facets that make us human, unique in our own making of free will.

And God is the light, for which all Good returns and all Evil parishes to dark.

The distinction between Good and Evil is that one is of perpetual Light and the other is of perpetual Dark. Creation and Creativity is of Light nature, even if something is destroyed something new comes in it's place.

Perpetual Dark is founded in concept when Eve ate the forbidden fruit that made Eve Ill in the spectrum of knowing Good and Evil.

We all carry this seed today, the fruit being equivocal to genetic modification and forbidden being equivocal to our temptation to be Gods, conquerors, worshiped as idols and such means that have paved the way to our self-destruction blinded by our collective ego and detachment from our collective perpetual destruction which is also portrayed in the Book of Revelations.

The concept of confession to God is to bring from His light to expose to the consciousness the ill in oneself for restitution with an aim of eventual salvation.

Prayer is often sought to gain something from God; however as we are said to be imperfect in all ways, which include hindsight, shouldn't we leave it up to God to decide which is best and weigh into him our hearts of concerns and thanks for all circumstances that can lead our road to salvation?

Prayer is a focusing and channeling mechanism to bridge His light to ours, from our heart's content and concern, also allows Him to open possibilities in us through the prayer meditation in ways to encourage intention and action through us.

And this focusing of prayer and meditation can become a state of being, the benefits of which our creation and spoken word in our interactions come from His light.

Giving credit away from ourselves in all our endeavors prevents our ego from taking over our intent and free will, which leads to perpetual destruction.

By crediting what light comes through us rather than attributing it to our material existence of thought encourages peace in the world. However assuming you are driven by God in your actions of perpetual destruction can be seen as being a false prophet or the work of the devil / being the work when spiritually ill in absence of conscience.

MOMENT SPACE

When we pray and meditate we can tap into the moment space. When it is said that God is Omni-Present, He is in moment space. The idea that moment does not exist because we cannot experience it ignores that all experience is made from moments. The spark of creativity through light can only come from the moment space. The experience of something becoming light as we have measured the experience of time with approaching light speed, time slows down and becomes moment space when light speed is reached.

THE STATE OF AMGOD/DOGMA

The Bible sets law from the word of God. However the writ of law of the State and the writ of law for the self has a history of convergence, where the law of the land becomes of religious writ.

When man strikes man in one's violation of the writ of the Bible, the state becomes barbaric and lawless in execution, since everyone has their idea of the Biblical writ of law.

The difference between State Law and Biblical Law is that State is established for the public and Biblical is established for the private.

When both converge, there is no longer private and all affairs become public scrutiny.

The Bible lays out the explanation that man is born into sin and that the conviction of which restitution is a private matter through one's growth in understanding the Bible.

If the convergence of State and Biblical Law were to be established and not separated, it would welcome the hypocritical sin of the elite upon and against the minor infractions of the many, repeating as history has shown, the enslavement and crusades of those viewed as unprivileged.

The result of which is the substitution of God's hand used as man's glove, that the I am God mentality of the ruling class is assumed in the social Dogma. Hence false idolship would become the norm.

We should guard ourselves from lending to this temptation of 'I Am God' and rather be with in the God experience, allowing His light to shine through us in all our endeavors, interactions and intentions.

Whether we practice religion, are spiritual in His light or just prefer to view the cosmic nature of the Universe becoming in-sync to our experiences with it, letting go of our ego in our creations as a challenge we can all overcome.

And it is easy to let go once we allow our creations to be shared openly and without reservation to it's attribution to ourselves.

This attribution is encouraged in present day society as a mode to maintain gainful exchange. However we can still provide for ourselves in that exchange with encouraging donation to those who appreciate our output in the Creative Commons.